

TERMS & CONDITIONS

Cybermarine Group

Effective Date: 15 October 2026

1. Introduction

Welcome to the official websites of Cybermarine Group.

These Website Terms & Conditions ("Terms") govern your access to and use of websites operated by the Cybermarine Group, including their content, information, and associated services.

For the purposes of these Terms, "Cybermarine", "we", "us", and "our" collectively refer to the following legal entities:

- Cybermarine Technologies Pte. Ltd. – Singapore
- Cybermarine Knowledge Systems Pvt. Ltd. – India
- Cybermarine Engineering Consultancy LLC – United Arab Emirates
- Cybermarine Ltd. – United Kingdom

Each entity is a separate legal organisation operating within its respective jurisdiction. References to Cybermarine Group do not imply the existence of a separate legal entity.

By accessing or using our websites, you acknowledge these Terms. Your use of the websites is subject to these Terms to the extent permitted by applicable law.

If you do not agree with these Terms, you should discontinue using the websites.

2. Scope and Applicability

These Terms apply to Cybermarine's official corporate websites, including:

- India: www.cybermarine.net
- Singapore: www.cybermarine.sg
- United Kingdom: www.cybermarine.uk
- United Arab Emirates: The official regional website of Cybermarine Engineering Consultancy LLC, where applicable.

These Terms also apply to associated country-specific pages, subdomains, and publicly accessible content operated by the relevant Cybermarine entities, unless separate terms are expressly specified.

The websites are primarily intended to provide information about Cybermarine's marine design, naval architecture, marine and offshore engineering consultancy, software solutions, and related professional services.

3. Use of Website

Visitors may access and use Cybermarine's websites for lawful, informational, and legitimate business purposes.

You agree not to:

- Use the websites for unlawful or fraudulent purposes.
- Attempt to gain unauthorised access to website infrastructure, servers, or associated systems.
- Introduce viruses, malicious code, or other harmful technologies.
- Interfere with the normal functionality, security, or availability of the websites.
- Misrepresent your identity or affiliation when communicating with Cybermarine.
- Copy, reproduce, distribute, or commercially exploit protected website content without appropriate authorisation.
- Use website content in a manner that infringes Cybermarine's intellectual property rights or the rights of third parties.

Cybermarine reserves the right to take appropriate action in response to misuse of its websites, subject to applicable law.

4. Website Content and Information

The information published on Cybermarine's websites is provided for general corporate, technical, and informational purposes.

We endeavour to maintain accurate and up-to-date information. However, website content may contain inaccuracies, omissions, or information that becomes outdated.

Information concerning engineering capabilities, project experience, software functionality, technical specifications, and services is intended to provide a general overview and may be subject to change.

Cybermarine does not warrant that all information published on its websites is complete, accurate, current, or suitable for a particular application.

Visitors should contact the relevant Cybermarine entity for confirmation of information required for specific commercial, engineering, or technical decisions.

5. Intellectual Property Rights

Unless otherwise stated, the content available on Cybermarine's websites is owned by, licensed to, or used with permission by the relevant Cybermarine entity.

Such content may include:

- Company names, logos, trademarks, and branding.
- Website design, layout, graphics, and written content.
- Engineering drawings, illustrations, and technical diagrams.
- Vessel designs, concepts, and project-related representations.
- Software descriptions, screenshots, and product information.
- Technical publications, brochures, and presentations.

- Photographs, images, animations, and other multimedia content.

All applicable intellectual property rights are reserved.

Visitors may view website content and download or print publicly available material for personal reference or legitimate internal business evaluation, provided that copyright notices and other proprietary markings are retained.

Unless expressly authorised in writing or permitted by applicable law, website content may not be reproduced, modified, distributed, republished, sold, sublicensed, or commercially exploited.

No ownership rights or intellectual property licences are transferred to visitors merely through their use of the websites.

6. Engineering and Technical Information Disclaimer

Cybermarine operates within specialised marine, offshore, and engineering industries.

Technical information, drawings, illustrations, vessel particulars, engineering concepts, and other materials published on our websites are provided for general information and demonstration purposes.

Such information should not be treated as approved engineering documentation, certified calculations, final construction drawings, operational instructions, or regulatory approvals.

Engineering solutions and technical requirements may differ depending on vessel type, operating conditions, applicable classification society rules, flag-state regulations, statutory requirements, and project-specific specifications.

Any engineering information intended for design, construction, modification, certification, or operational use must be independently evaluated and appropriately verified for the intended application.

Nothing published on our websites constitutes a representation that a particular design, product, system, or technical solution has received classification society or regulatory approval unless expressly stated for the specific item and scope.

7. Software Products and Solutions

Cybermarine's websites may provide information about proprietary software applications, digital solutions, and related technical services.

Descriptions, screenshots, specifications, capabilities, and illustrations are provided for general product information and may change as products are developed or updated.

The availability, functionality, licensing, support, maintenance, warranty, and other commercial conditions of software products are governed by the applicable agreements entered into with the relevant Cybermarine entity.

Accessing information about a software product through our websites does not grant any licence or right to install, reproduce, distribute, modify, or otherwise use the software.

Any software-related rights and obligations will be governed by the relevant software licence agreement, subscription agreement, or other applicable contractual documentation.

8. Business Enquiries and Communications

Visitors may contact Cybermarine through website enquiry forms, published email addresses, or other official communication channels.

Submission of an enquiry, request for quotation, technical requirement, or other communication does not automatically establish a contractual relationship between the visitor and any Cybermarine entity.

Any quotation, proposal, technical service, software licence, or commercial engagement will be subject to the applicable contractual terms agreed upon by the parties.

Information provided through general website enquiries should not be considered confidential unless confidentiality obligations have been separately agreed or otherwise arise under applicable law.

Visitors are encouraged not to submit highly sensitive, proprietary, or confidential technical information through general website enquiry forms without first establishing an appropriate communication arrangement.

9. Third-Party Links

Cybermarine's websites may contain links to external websites, professional organisations, classification societies, industry resources, suppliers, or other third-party platforms.

These links are provided for general information or convenience.

Cybermarine does not necessarily endorse, control, or assume responsibility for the content, availability, accuracy, security, or practices of external websites.

Visitors accessing external websites do so subject to the applicable terms and policies of those websites.

10. Privacy and Personal Information

Cybermarine respects the privacy of its website visitors.

Personal information voluntarily submitted through website enquiries or other communications will be handled in accordance with our Privacy Policy and applicable data protection laws.

Our corporate websites do not use visitor analytics, advertising pixels, or behavioural tracking tools for targeted advertising or individual visitor profiling.

For further information, please refer to the Privacy Policy available on the relevant Cybermarine website.

11. Website Availability

Cybermarine endeavours to maintain the availability and proper functioning of its websites.

However, we do not guarantee uninterrupted, error-free, or continuous access.

Website availability may be affected by maintenance, technical issues, hosting infrastructure, network interruptions, security measures, or circumstances beyond our reasonable control.

Cybermarine may modify, suspend, or discontinue website content or functionality when reasonably necessary, without prior notice, subject to applicable law.

12. Disclaimer of Warranties

To the extent permitted by applicable law, Cybermarine's websites and their content are provided on an "as available" and "as is" basis.

Cybermarine makes no warranties or representations, express or implied, regarding the uninterrupted availability, completeness, accuracy, reliability, or fitness for a particular purpose of the website content.

Nothing in these Terms limits any warranties, obligations, or rights that cannot lawfully be excluded.

13. Limitation of Liability

To the maximum extent permitted by applicable law, Cybermarine and its respective entities shall not be liable for indirect, incidental, consequential, or special losses arising from the use of, inability to access, or reliance upon information published on the websites, including loss of business opportunities, profits, or data, where such liability may lawfully be excluded.

These limitations apply only to the use of the websites and their publicly available content.

They do not replace or modify liability provisions contained in separately executed engineering consultancy agreements, software licence agreements, or other contracts.

Nothing in these Terms excludes or limits liability for fraud, fraudulent misrepresentation, death or personal injury caused by negligence where such exclusion is prohibited, or any other liability that cannot lawfully be excluded or limited.

14. No Contractual or Professional Engagement

Content available on Cybermarine's websites does not constitute a binding commercial offer, professional appointment, contractual commitment, or guarantee of service availability.

Descriptions of engineering services, software solutions, and technical capabilities are provided for general information.

Any professional engagement, design responsibility, technical deliverable, software licence, or other contractual obligation will arise only under the applicable agreement or written confirmation issued by the relevant Cybermarine entity.

Where a separate written agreement exists, its terms shall govern the relevant engagement and prevail over these Website Terms & Conditions in the event of any inconsistency relating to that engagement.

15. Governing Law and Jurisdiction

These Terms are intended to operate across Cybermarine's regional websites.

Subject to applicable mandatory laws and any separate binding agreement, disputes relating specifically to the use of a regional website will generally be governed by the laws of the jurisdiction in which the entity operating that website is established:

- Singapore: Laws of Singapore.
- India: Laws of India.
- United Arab Emirates: Applicable laws of the United Arab Emirates and the relevant emirate.
- United Kingdom: Laws of England and Wales, where applicable to Cybermarine Ltd.

Disputes may be referred to the courts having jurisdiction over the relevant Cybermarine entity, subject to mandatory legal requirements.

Nothing in these Terms limits any statutory rights or legal protections that cannot lawfully be excluded.

16. Changes to These Terms

Cybermarine reserves the right to revise or update these Terms periodically to reflect changes in website content, business operations, legal requirements, or organisational arrangements.

Revised Terms will be published on the relevant websites with an updated effective date.

Continued use of the websites following publication of revised Terms will be subject to those Terms to the extent permitted by applicable law.

Visitors are encouraged to review this page periodically.
